Excerpt: .she said, and I will do all your bidding. You are wise and brave, fit to be my master. I will obey you. The pigs were brought from the sty. Circe used some magic words and touched them with her rod. They stood up sailors, just as they had been. Then the other men were called up from the shore, and all feasted together. But Ulysses always kept the moly with him, and watched that Circe should not deceive him. DANGERS OF THE SEA BEFORE Ulysses and his men reached Circe s island(they had stopped at the country where Jeoius lived. He had charge of the winds, and could send out gentle breezes or wild storms as he chose. He was glad to see Ulysses and gave him a leather bag tied with a silver string. In it all the hindering and dangerous winds were safely shut up. The fair and favoring winds were free to blow the ships along to their home country. Ulysses steered the boat for nine days and then, tired out, lay down to sleep. The foolish sailors had often looked at that strange bag and wondered what it held. They thought that it must be gold, and that they ought to have their share. They untied the string to get some of the money, but the angry winds rushed out, the ships were caught in a fierce storm, and were blown back to the island of Eolus. He...
